

Telling Your Medicaid Story to Policymakers Workshop

Federal and State lawmakers need to know how Medicaid helps you and your family, and what it would mean to your life if the services and supports you have are reduced or stopped. National disability advocates think Congress may cut federal Medicaid funding and may change what states can do so it is easier for states to cut Medicaid programs. Many federal and state decision-makers do not know how Medicaid helps people stay healthy and living in their homes, not institutions.

Join us for a virtual workshop to get the latest update on what is happening at the federal level, connect with a community of people affected by Medicaid, and develop your Medicaid story so what you say can have the most impact on your elected officials.

Tuesday, Jan. 21st, 12 pm to 1:30 pm

Registration: bit.ly/Storytelling1Eng

Thursday, Jan. 23rd, 3 pm to 4:30 pm

Registration: bit.ly/Storytelling2Eng

What the workshop will cover:

Latest updates on federal Medicaid funding;

How to tell your story with a focus on public policy and to legislators;

Large group discussions on how to tell your story;

Working with other advocates in small groups to refine your story and practice telling it in a low stakes situation.

Questions?

Contact Tami Jackson at
Tamara.Jackson@wisconsin.gov